

Zhao FuJiang (???, passed away on 26/07/2007) was a famous Chinese martial arts practitioner, hailing from Tianjin, China. Over his lifetime he has studied and taught several martial arts. His main arts were Baji Quan, Xing Yi Quan and Da Cheng Quan (Yi Quan). He also inherited a special form of Dantian training for combat, which is not style-specific. His Baji Quan, he learned from famous grandmaster Wu Xiufeng. Under grandmaster Wu, Zhao was the gongfu brother of master Tian Jinzhong, who was also famous in Tianjin, and practiced the rare art Jingang Bashi. Tian Jinzhong's Baji Quan was heavily influenced and improved by his Jingang Bashi, while Zhao Fujiang developed his Baji further with a slightly different flavour, based more on his experience with Xing Yi, Da Cheng Quan and his unique Dantian methods.
